Chemical Effect of an Electric Current

When a current flows it may cause a chemical reaction.

Charging a cell is an example of electricity producing a chemical change.

When the cell discharges the chemical reaction is reversed

Other examples include:

- Electroplating metals
- Electrolysis of water